Workshop Begins For Supervisors

The supervision workshop for County and City supervisors and coordinators and for administrators assigned to the supervision of teacher personnel will open this morning. The Workshop will meet each morning at nine o'clock and proceed until noon. Because of the limited facilities available the enrollment will be limited to forty students.

The goals of the workshop include: the solution of supervision problems most pressing to the individual student; the attainment of a fresh perspective in the area of supervision; and the gaining of information and skill in the areas of Working-with-Others.

Among the activities planned are: individual or "interest group" consultations with the staff, between representatives of similar districts and within County-staff groups; hearing visiting specialists; viewing supervision films; and formulating by discussion, research and writing, District-staff or County staff plans for immediate, practical use.

The college has assigned the following persons to the Workshop: Dr. Lelia Ormsby, Dr. James Bradfield, and Dr. Henry Hansen.

The visiting specialists who will participate are: Dr. I. Books Published By Science Dept.

Students at Sacramento State College do not merely read books —they write them. Four publications have been issued this year from the department of Life Science, written by students and based upon their original research. The latest of these to come from the press is "Nature Notes from California State Redwood Parks."

The author is John B. Allard, college student from Willows, California, who writes interestingly of the animals and plants of Humboldt County and particularly of Richardson Grove State Park, where he is stationed as Park Naturalist for the summer. The pamphlet is richly illustrated with pen and ink sketches by Julie K. Howard. Her work shows that she is destined to be one of California's leading nature artists.

Another more technical work, and very useful to agricultural agents and warehouse managers, is "A Key to the Lepidopterous Larvae Inhabiting Stored Foods in California" by George T. Okumura. There is also a "Check List of the Birds of the Sacramento Area" by Thomas F. Wittsche.

The nature notes sells for 50 cents; the key to lepidopterous larvae for 25 cents; the bird check list for 5 cents, and the plant check list for 25 cents. Mr. C. M. Goethe, Sacramento naturalist and civic leader, has contributed a paper entitled "Mother Lode Gold Mining Stories." This sells for 25 cents.

Dr. Hubert O. Jenkins, Professor of Life Science at Sacramento State College and editor of the series, reports that next year will see the publication of several handbooks on the plants and animals of northern California. These papers serve to train students in science, art, and journalism, and at the same time supply the public with very useful information on local natural history.

The publications can be obtained from The Editor, Natural History Series, Sacramento State College, Sacramento 18, California.

Little Appointed Project Director

Dr. Wilson Little, professor of education at Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College, has accepted the position of Director of the Regional Project in Secondary Education. The appointment was announced recently by Dr. James M. Bradfield, chairman of the project's advisory board. Dr. Little will have his headquarters at Sacramento State College, effective on September 1.

The director's position has been made possible through a $14,000 grant from the Rosenberg Foundation of San Francisco. Educational agencies and associations, offices of county school superintendents, and high schools concerned with secondary education in Northern California are sponsoring the project.

Dr. Little has had extensive experience as teacher, curriculum director, and administrator on the elementary, secondary, college, and university levels. He was for three years an associate professor of education at the University of California at Berkeley, and he formerly was Dean of the School of Education at the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College. At the present time, Dr. Little is on leave-of-absence from the Oklahoma college to do research at the University of Wisconsin. His doctor of philosophy degree was received from the University of Texas.

Like most beginners, he managed to hit one magnificent, long drive during the 18 holes. When the round was over, he couldn't stop boasting about that particular shot.

"Wasn't that drive marvelous?" he asked a friend for the tenth time.

"Yes," was the bitter reply. "It's a shame you can't have it stuffed!"
